

Have you seen students use their cell phones to cheat?

Umm... I haven't.

No, but I'm sure that they do. But I have not directly witnessed it where I was sure that's what was going on.

I've seen people pass their phone from person to person.

I haven't. I know that they text in my class and I know that they surf the Web in my class and they're horrible at hiding it.

No, not to cheat, that I know of. I've seen them use it in class.

I don't know if they use cell phones to cheat in the sense of a test and they look up answers, but more to cheat out of being there.

I don't know if I've actually seen it happen, but I know that it probably does happen.

I don't mind if they use it before I start lecturing or whatever, but once I start my lecture, if I see they have a smartphone out I always tell them to turn it off. I don't deal with cell phones well – I'm kind of old-fashioned that way.
