Anthony Atkins Transcript

I just wanted to wish Kairos a happy anniversary of 30 years. What a great accomplishment! My name is Tony Atkins and I was a doctoral student at Ball State University. I've worked with some really great people there in the beginnings of Kairos. Also, as a doctoral student, I was a travel coordinator for Computers and Writing 2001, A Space Odyssey, which was a great conference. I enjoyed working on it back in 2001, but that was my foray into computers and writing, into Kairos, rhetoric, technology, and pedagogy, and I was able to get one of my first publications there as a doctoral student.

Not long after that, Aaron Carper became my co-communications editor. And if you go back in the archives to some of the earlier issues of the journal, you'll see some of the work that we did back then. I think we were both doctoral students at the time. And my work has continued with Kairos, as I've been on the editorial board for a while and trying to review all of your good work for the last several years as a reviewer. But congratulations! Kairos is a great, great online journal, one of the first of its kind. Congratulations!
